Your Honor:

I appreciate the opportunity to convey again, as part of this submission, that I should never have said that Celsius had regulatory clarity when it did not, and I should never have said that I was not selling my CEL tokens when I was. It was wrong to say those things and I knew better.

I'm not trying in any way to minimize my illegal conduct. I feel horrible about the pain and suffering I caused. And I am prepared to face the consequences of my actions.

Judge, I came to this country as an immigrant and I was always grateful for the opportunities my new country and its people gave me. I built a life from nothing and was hoping to help others do the same.

But my dream became a nightmare for my customers and my family. I have achieved the opposite of what I set out to do and I am heartbroken about that.

I talk to victims of Celsius almost daily and try to help them recover. I know the waiting and anxiety involved with the bankruptcy has been very painful.

I have disappointed so many people who trusted me. I ask forgiveness from the community, from my customers, the employees and my family.

And I ask the court for some leniency. I hope maybe to go to one more of my kids' bar mitzvahs or weddings.

I hope to use the rest of my life in service to others and service to society and to apply my interests in the field of science, which might help people.

I thank the Court for the enormous amount of time and consideration it paid to this case. I never spent a day in criminal court before this case and I can assure Your Honor that I never will again.

I hope to have the opportunity to say a few more words at my sentencing hearing.

Respectfully,

Alex Mashinsky
